

Disclosure of credit information to credit reporting bodies

There are significant changes to the credit reporting provisions of the Privacy Act. These changes will allow credit providers to access more comprehensive information about the credit worthiness of individuals. This means credit providers can assess more accurately an individual's ability to repay a loan. The changes also include strict rules around what information in credit reports can be used for, and who it can be shared with.

Go to creditsmart.org.au/introduction-to-credit-reporting to read more about the changes to the credit reporting provisions of the Privacy Act.

We may disclose credit information to the following credit reporting bodies. You may obtain a copy of each credit reporting bodies policy about their management of credit reporting information. To do so, please contact them or visit their website.
